

Randy Pausch's last lecture was extremely valuable. He has a way of speaking that is entertaining enough for anyone to be engaged with without breaking away. I enjoyed his heavy use of visuals throughout the lecture. What resonated most for me, was his endless perseverance to achieve. A common analogy he comes back to a lot throughout the video is "brick walls", basically this was his way of saying, not letting failures and setbacks stop you only further proves how badly you want to accomplish your goal.